ART-ROCK LEGEND LOU REED DEAD AT 71

GETTY IMAGES FILE

Reuters

Lou Reed, whose band the Velvet Underground became one of the most influential in rock by fusing art and music in 1960s New York through its collaboration with artist Andy Warhol, died on Sunday at age 71, Rolling Stone reported.

The cause of death was not reported, but Reed underwent a liver transplant in May.

Reed's representatives could not immediately be reached to confirm the news.

Online tributes were pouring in on social media after a message sent earlier in the day on Reed's Twitter and Facebook pages read simply "The Door."

The Velvet Underground never achieved much commercial success, but revolutionized rock in the 1960s and '70s with a mixture of thrashing guitar licks and smooth melodies sung by Reed or the sultry German model Nico, who briefly collaborated with the band at Warhol's insistence.

The band has long been recognized as a major musical influence on punk and art rock, as reflected in a quote often attributed to musician Brian Eno: "The first Velvet Underground album only sold 10,000 copies, but everyone who bought it formed a band."

An admitted hard drinker and drug user for many years, Reed underwent a liver transplant earlier this year at the Cleveland Mayo Clinic, his wife, Laurie Anderson, told

The Times of London, after he had canceled five California concert dates scheduled in April.

"I am a triumph of modern medicine," Reed posted on his website June 1, without directly acknowledging the transplant. "I look forward to being on stage performing, and writing more songs to connect with your hearts and spirits and the universe well into the future."

Some of the Velvet Underground's best-known songs include "Sweet Jane," "I'm Waiting for the Man" and "Heroin." Reed's most recently released recorded work was "Lulu," a 2011 collaboration with heavy metal act Metallica.

Musicians mourn

RedEye

To modify a now-immortal saying, not everyone heard Lou Reed's music, but everyone who did started a band. Here's how Reed's fellow musicians mourned him on Twitter after hearing Sunday's news.

@okkervilriver: Lou Reed might have been the single biggest influence on my music & his encouragement changed my life. I'm devastated.

@MileyCyrus: noooooooooo notttttttt LOU REED

@LennyKravitz: Lou, rest in peace on the wild side. #rip #loureed

@joshgroban: A sad day in music. RIP Lou.

Stephen Markley

• redeye@tribune.com
• @stephenmarkley

Two things happened recently: I turned 30, and a University of Iowa teaching assistant accidentally emailed pornographic pictures of herself and her boyfriend to her class.

I bring this up only because Chicago and I are on a friends-with-benefits basis for the next year while I'm at the Iowa Writers'

Workshop, taking classes and teaching. So when news broke of a TA emailing students amateur porn shots, basically everyone I knew texted me to see if I'd gotten fired.

"Stephen, you know the Internet is not the place for that sort of behavior. —Love, Grandma"

No, people. That was not me. I'm also not Iowa's other famous instant Gawker headline-creator, @vodka_samin, who got arrested for running onto the field during a football game and blew a .314 on her Breathalyzer test, which Gary Busey's fermenting corpse couldn't manage.

Turning 30 just when I stepped back into this madness has created an interesting situation. On the one hand, I never thought I'd be 30. The first RedEye I ever picked up when I moved to Chicago had a Page 4 column by some guy whining about being 30, and I was like, "Bwaha! Screw that guy. Suck on some dentures with all the other 30-year-olds, you Walter Matthau-looking punk-ass. Who turns 30? Eat a Cialis, 'Mummy Returns.'"

Then it happened to me.

Yet even as I basically lived my life like I never left undergrad, now I'm actually spending much of my time at the paragon of the debauched Midwest university campus, the No. 1 party school in the nation (according to the frat boy who puked on the sidewalk outside my apartment). My entire program depends on me showing up at this bar, the Fox Head, after class on Tuesdays and crushing PBRs till closing. I mean these 22-year-olds at SpoCo aren't going to make out with themselves, for God's sake! They need my help.

While my friends get married, have children, buy houses, get life insurance, start retirement accounts, run for public office and learn how to prepare meals other than microwavable hot dogs, I have embarked upon a state of arrested development so profoundly all-encompassing that I sleepwalk to the backyard in the middle of the night and begin drinking cheap beer, throwing cinder blocks over my head and calling to the imaginary friends around me, "Bro! That was a great cinder block throw, bro."

That's why I couldn't do the typical, obligatory, "Oh God, I'm 30, but hey, it's actually pretty cool to be 30 because I'm wiser and have gained great perspective on life and love" column.

I have gained no perspective. I am not wise.

Examining the controversial definitional problems of world literature, the inconsistencies of apolitical aid programs filling the humanitarian vacuum after a transnational disaster and mastering the craft of producing fiction for the psychologically sophisticated reader must only be the beginning. I must find a prestigious, historic program that produces masters and giants. What I really need is a cohort of serious, like-minded people intent on perfecting their skill sets and networking with some of the finest intellects in their field.

It's decided. Next week, I rush Sig Chi.

Riders report Ventra readers racking up fares on single rides

Chicago Tribune

Chicago-area transit agencies' move to the Ventra fare-payment system, which has been pockmarked by extremely long waits for cards in the mail and an activation process that led to the temporary reinstatement of old payment options, could be on the cusp of another rough patch.

While CTA and Pace officials downplayed complaints flooding social media websites and, presumably, CTA and Pace customer service hotlines, some Ventra customers say they are discovering from their Ventra online accounts that they've been double-, triple- or even quadruple-charged for fares because of misbehaving Ventra readers on CTA and Pace buses and at CTA rail turnstiles.

CTA and Pace say they are still trying to get a handle on the depth of problems with Ventra two months into its introduction, and the Ventra contractor is working to complete software fixes and will be held accountable, transit officials vow.

"Our team of analysts is currently combing through a massive amount of data to determine all issues with the system and understand them better and make sure they are addressed," CTA spokeswoman Tammy Chase said Friday.

Many riders who tapped their Ventra cards and failed to receive a "Go" signal on the screen tapped again, either on their own or because transit personnel told them to, until the "Go" message flashed, unaware that in some cases multiple charges were being racked up.

Ventra customers are at times treated to free rides because Ventra readers are out of service or there is a delay for the readers to reset between each fare payment. (One benefit of the contactless Ventra card was supposed to be quicker boarding.)

Transit officials said software and data communications glitches—some because of Ventra and others caused by infrastructure still in use from the old fare-collection system—are the source of apparent malfunctions in the Ventra readers at rail turnstiles

BY THE NUMBERS

On the old fare-collection system that is being retired Dec. 15, the average number of errors is about 1,700 a month at rail turnstiles and about 1,250 a month on bus fare boxes, CTA spokeswoman Tammy Chase said. "We don't yet have comparable numbers for Ventra," Chase said.

and onboard CTA and Pace buses.

The two transit agencies say they are analyzing data and waiting for Ventra contractor Cubic Transportation Systems to upgrade the software.

Meanwhile, while many riders use words like "disaster," "fiasco" and "[bleep]" to describe the Ventra rollout, the CTA and Pace insist it's too early to judge how well the fare payment system is working.

Asked how much longer it will take to get a grip on Ventra's performance, spokeswoman Chase could not say.

"Keep in mind how early we are into this transition and that it has taken a bit of time to get some meaningful data to examine," Chase said.

Lakeview fire not suspicious

Chicago Tribune

Officials were unable to immediately determine the cause of an extra-alarm fire in Lakeview on Friday night that destroyed a building housing several businesses, officials said, but the cause does not appear to be suspicious.

According to investigators with the Office of Fire Investigation, the fire at 3330 N. Clark St. began in Samah Hookah Lounge, but officials said further analysis is needed to determine the cause of the blaze, according to the Chicago Fire Department. Department spokesman Larry Langford said Sunday that it does not appear to be suspicious in origin.

The businesses affected by the fire were the hookah lounge, Thai Classic Restaurant and Roadhouse 66, according to the fire department.

Crews took about 1½ hours to extinguish the fire, which demolished the one-story building.

A woman who was sleeping when the fire started and a dog were rescued by firefighters from a building just to the south of the building.

GOP reps defend foreign surveillance

WASHINGTON Two Republican congressmen on Sunday defended Washington's surveillance programs abroad in reaction to protests from allies, after the wide scope of the eavesdropping was revealed this year by former spy agency contractor Edward Snowden.

Mike Rogers (R-Mich.), chairman of the House of Representatives intelligence committee, said much of the public information on those efforts, including allegations that the National Security Agency had spied on millions of French citizens, was misguided.

"They are seeing three or four pieces of a thousand-piece puzzle and trying to come to a conclusion," he said on CNN's "State of the Nation" program.

The media was given one slide, which included the word "France" on it, Rogers said, which "started a huge amount of discussion about Americans collecting phone calls in France with French citizens."

"That is 100 percent wrong," he said. The slide referred to a counter-terrorism program that had nothing to do with French citizens, he said.

Instead, Rogers said, European authorities don't have enough oversight of their intelligence services. He suggested that the new revelations were not surprises to European intelligence agencies, but only to the governments for which they work.

Rep. Peter King (R-N.Y.), chairman of the House subcommittee on counterterrorism and intelligence, speaking on NBC's "Meet the Press," said, "The president should stop apologizing, stop being defensive."

"The reality is the NSA has saved thousands of lives, not just in the United States but also in France and Germany and throughout Europe. The French are some ones to talk; the fact is, they've carried out spying operations against the United States, both the government and industry. As far as Germany, that's where the Hamburg plot began, which led to 9/11. They've had dealings with Iran and Iraq, [and] North Korea."

New York family brutally murdered

A New York woman and her four young children were hacked to death with a meat cleaver in their Brooklyn home over the weekend, and the father's cousin will be charged with their murders Sunday, the New York Police Department said.

2 arrested after college stabbing

Police arrested two men Sunday following a stabbing outside a student apartment complex at Indiana University in Bloomington that prompted a campus-wide alert and a search for the suspects, the university said.

Syria meets first weapons deadline

Syria has submitted a declaration of its chemical weapons program and a plan to eliminate them to the world's chemical weapons watchdog, the organization said Sunday, meeting the first major deadline of the destruction plan.

2013 Regular Season

BEARS

GET 'EM WHILE YOU CAN

And the Bears' not-quite-midseason awards go to ...

By Jack M Silverstein

FOR REDEYE

NFL midseason reports usually are written after eight games—ya know, at mid-season. But with seven games in the books and injuries piling up, the 2013 Bears have reached a crossroads. No time like the present, then, to distribute awards and look at what's to come.

MARTELLUS BENNETT

The Mike Ditka Award for Best Season Ever for a Chicago Bears Tight End

Iron Mike, meet the Black Unicorn. When the Bears signed Bennett after his one season with the N.Y. Giants, nobody knew quite what to expect from the gabby, imaginative player. But off-the-field creativity aside, it's been awhile since Bears fans have seen a tight end like Bennett, whose season projections in touchdowns (nine) and yards (814) would trail only Ditka's best marks (12 TDs, 1,076 yards).

MATT FORTE

The Walter Payton Award for Eye-Popping Running Back Stats

The hiring of coach Marc Trestman brought lots of speculation about a potential increase in offensive production, and nobody seemed giddier over the summer than Matt Forte. He was right to be. The sixth-year back is having a career year, averaging 113.5 total yards per game while on pace for nearly 14 touchdowns. He's also within striking distance of his own franchise record for receiving yards per game for a running back (40.8, set in 2011).

ALSHON JEFFERY

The Marcus Robinson Award for Breakout Wide Receiver

Is this award just an excuse to get Marcus Robinson's name in print? Of course! But Alshon Jeffery's receiving numbers—he already has career highs in receptions and yards—warrants ties to Robinson, who, like Jeffery, also attended South Carolina. And with 88 yards rushing, he can become only the second Bears receiver to gain 100 yards rushing in a season, something Dennis Gentry did twice.

BRANDON MARSHALL

The Marty Booker Award for Best All-Around Receiver, Only If Booker Was a Game-Breaker Like Brandon Marshall

While Bennett, Forte and Jeffery have been the most obvious beneficiaries of The Trestman Effect, Brandon Marshall continues to be the Bears' key offensive performer. He's on pace to tie his 2012 TD mark despite fewer catches per game, but more importantly, he has refined his blocking to an art, meaning he affects plays on every down, not just the ones on which he's targeted.

DEVIN HESTER & ROBBIE GOULD

The Devin Hester & Robbie Gould Awards for Excellence in Returning and Kicking, Respectively

Since entering the league, Devin Hester and Robbie Gould have been among the league's standard-bearers at their positions. And with chips on their shoulders, both have delivered in 2013: Hester is leading the league in kick return yards, and he snapped his no-TD streak last week with an 81-yard punt return score, his NFL record-tying 19th career non-offensive touchdown. Meanwhile, Gould's converting field goals at a career-best 92.3 percent clip and is tied for the NFL record with 12 straight field goals made of 50 yards or more.

JAY CUTLER

The Erik Kramer Award for Best Season by a Bears Quarterback

The Jay Cutler "I Can't Believe I Just Went Down in a Contract Year" Award Norm MacDonald had a joke about how depressed all the crocodiles must have been when they found out a stingray killed the Crocodile Hunter. The same can be said for every defender who ever packed a wallop on Jay Cutler, only to see him limp off the field on a relatively benign tackle. Unfortunately, that tackle included a debilitating groin injury. Also unfortunate is that Cutler was producing his best season as a Bear. Before getting hurt, he was on pace for franchise records in passing yards and touchdowns.

JACK MSILVERSTEIN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

TRENDS TO WATCH AFTER THE BYE WEEK

Losing streak vs. Green Bay

If the Bears want to avoid a 4-4 record, they'll have to do something they haven't done since 2007: beat the Packers at Lambeau. They've lost five straight in Green Bay, while a win Nov. 4 would be their first over the Pack ANYWHERE since Sept. 27, 2010. Yuck.

Regular-season elimination games

The Bears weren't eliminated from the 2012 playoffs until the last day of the season. But they eliminated themselves over the season's second half by losing six games to playoff teams. Five of the Bears' nine remaining games are against possible playoff teams (Green Bay twice, Detroit, Dallas, Philadelphia). As those games go, so goes the season.

Jay Cutler's contract year

Cutler was putting together a career year before he was derailed by his groin injury. With his contract expiring, has he done enough to warrant a new deal? If not, the pressure will be on him big time upon his return.

1	The Bulls finished the preseason undefeated. What's that mean?	They're the tallest kid in preschool.	They get a BCS bid, right?	82-0 in the regular season, obv.	0-0.	The Bulls are going to win the Eastern conference. No joke on this one.
2	What last-minute preparations are the Bulls making before the season begins?	Making sure D-Rose's brother keeps his yapper shut.	Get that preseason championship banner made!	Resting their groins, ankles, heads, shoulders, hips, feet ...	Printing T-shirts that read "Stop staring at my Thibs!"	Jimmy Butler needs to get a cut, man. Out there looking like Kunta Kinte.
3	Why does the NFL want to put a team in Europe?	(Cue Alleluia music) The Almighty Dollar.	So we can teach those Europeans what REAL football is!	Wine and tapas concessions = big bucks.	Actually, wouldn't the Jags be the perfect mascot for a team in France?	Because, you know, putting one in L.A. first makes too much sense?
4	Adrian Peterson gave his offensive linemen snowmobiles. What should Matt Forte do?	Focus. Run. Score. Repeat.	Bulldozers.	10-speeds for everyone!	Give Bears fans the gift of a 200-yard game vs. Green Bay.	Give them a healthy QB that doesn't suck?
5	Punishing students for leaving a college football game early is like putting ketchup on your hot dog. Sounds like a good idea, but you just don't do it.	... skipping this last question to check if my install of Sarcasm Font 2.0 worked this week.	... so stupid I can't even say anything funny about it.	... (drops mic, leaves early)	... Not giving THE UNDEFEATED FLORIDA STATE SEMINOLES their rightful spot at No. 1 (all caps because I care).

Are you Experiencing NEW BACK PAIN?

Are you interested in testing a new treatment?

Northwestern University researchers are conducting a clinical research trial of a new drug for the treatment of acute back pain.

Participation in this study will require 7 visits over 6 months, including 2 MRI scans.

Eligible participants must:

- Be 18 years or older
- Have low back pain that starts less than 12 weeks ago
- No back pain in the past
- Be able to undergo an MRI (no pacemakers, any metal implants)

Qualified volunteers will receive study-related doctor visits, lab services and study medication free of charge if they are in a group receiving drugs. Compensation and parking reimbursement will be provided.

If you or someone you know might be interested in participating in this study, please contact us as soon as possible.

Anybody heard of this Rose guy?Ben Johnson

redeyesports
@tlisbenjo

I'm not sure if anybody in Chicago has heard about this, but apparently Derrick Rose is back playing basketball again.

Remember Rose? Won the NBA MVP a few years ago and then tore an important knee ligament? Think way back in your memory.

He might not spring immediately to mind because the media have been oddly silent on his injury and subsequent return. But he's back now. He'll be right there on the court with all the Bulls you've come to know and love, such as Nazr Mohammed and Marquis Teague.

If the media had enough time to cover such things, they might ingest every available moment of Rose's participation in team activities and spit out pages and pages of pointless speculation about whether he "is ahead of schedule" or "has begun cutting in drills" or "looks ready" or "might be an improved player." They might even go overboard with that stuff, flooding our senses with a nonstop, 24-hour news cycle assault of non-updates.

But the media have been busy with other more "important" things related to the Bulls. For instance—and I can't believe I'm even writing this because it goes without saying—I'm exhausted of all endless reports from Madrid about the progress of Nikola Mirotic.

We all know by now that Mirotic is averaging 13.7 points and 4.7 rebounds in only 20 minutes per game and shooting a sublime 69 percent from the field. The media are like a broken record on how his game is translatable to Brook Lopez but with Ray Allen's shooting range.

Yes, yes, we get it, that is in three games of a still-young season of combined Spanish and Euroleague play against the dregs of those leagues, but he is nonetheless scintillating. And yes, we also know any hypothetical Carlos Boozer trade that would also involve the rights to Mirotic for, say, Minnesota's Kevin Love or Atlanta's Al Horford might be a double-edged sword. Tell us something we don't know.

It's all just speculation anyway until the guy actually plays in the NBA during the regular season, am I right? It's like, hey, give us a break, media. Tell us about this Rose guy. Like for instance: Is he good at basketball?

Mike Magee clinched the Major League Soccer scoring championship, but the Fire were eliminated from the playoffs with a loss at New York on Sunday. The Fire needed at least a tie to reach the postseason. Things looked promising when Magee's goal gave the Fire a 1-0 first-half lead. GET TO KNOW THE WINNER OF REDEYE'S BEST SANDWICH TOURNAMENT

By Michael Nagrant | FOR REDEYE

There are things, for all time, which are decidedly the essence of Chicago: the Belushis, Michael Jordan, The Second City, thick-fingered Old Style-drinking dudes who pronounce the word sausage as “saah-sidge,” the Sears—err, Willis—Tower, hot dogs dragged through the garden and deep-dish pizza. The most underrated of these, or maybe the least known outside the shores of Lake Michigan, is the Italian beef sandwich.

When I arrived here in 2001, my realtor Joe Quartana, a second-generation Irving Park resident and a serious food lover who always “had a guy” whenever I needed something done, introduced me to the local delicacy. Quartana has since then helped me buy and sell three homes, but he changed my Chicago life not through realty—it was when he bought me my first beef.

He took me to the original Al's on Taylor Street and then Johnnie's in northwest suburban Elmwood Park. He saved me embarrassment by warning me of the “no cheese” rule, and cut down on my dry-cleaning bills by briefing me on the “Italian stance,” whereby you hold the beef at a 45-degree angle to the counter and lean over the sandwich, so the beef gravy (not jus, not juice, just gravy) lands below ya, but not on ya.

The Italian beef, in case you're not familiar (and that's doubtful, as hundreds of RedEye readers recently crowned it the king of all sandwiches in our bracket-style Best Sandwich Tournament), is usually a cheaper cut of beef—top round, butt or sirloin—roasted and spiced, drenched in gravy, nestled in a crusty white Italian roll and topped with either hot or sweet giardiniera. Many Chicagoans often truncate this to “giardinere,” but either way, its rough translation from Italian is “from the garden” and it's an assortment of peppers, celery, carrots and other vegetables packed in oil and occasionally vinegar.

Serve it with cheese, and you've got a Philly cheesesteak. Add a cup of jus on the side and it's a French dip. The French dip predates the Italian beef by 30 years or so, meaning the Italian beef is likely a descendant. The local origins are murky and contested, but most sources agree the originator was either Pasquale Scala, who established his namesake packing company in 1925 and served the Depression-era snack at weddings, or Al Ferreri and his sister-and brother-in-law Frances and Chris Pacelli Sr., who served it at the original Al's in Little Italy on Harrison and Laflin streets in 1938. The Pacellis later relocated to 1079 W. Taylor St., where they remain today.

The beef has made its way (through Al's franchising) as far as San Jose, Calif., and Jay Leno brought Mr. Beef on “Late Night with David Letterman” in 1989 (before they were archrivals).

Though it has a storied history, Chicagoans are often divided on the supremacy of beef. Royal Lichter, a North Side realtor and local foodie, said, “The idea of Italian beef is great, but mostly [are] very poorly executed. ... I would not feel comfortable representing this to any visitor or even most Chicagoans. It could be Chicago's gift to the world, but not the average one.” Alan Lake—a local chef and restaurant consultant (most recently at Chief O'Neill's), avid LTHforum.com poster and author of the forthcoming book “Garlic Manifesto”—grew up eating Al's sandwiches “al trunko ... on my brother's deuce-and-a-quarter ragtop,” he said. “It's the bee's knees. The real deal. The Mahatma Gandhi.”

HERE'S THE BEEF

Italian beef at Joe Boston's Italian Beef
JASON LITTLE PHOTOS FOR REDEYE

THREE TO TRY

What better way to spend an afternoon than sinking my teeth into some of my favorite Italian beef sandwiches around town? I focused on places within city limits, but any discussion of beefs also should include the aforementioned Johnnie's in Elmwood Park (notably their combo, a beef stuffed with a spicy Italian sausage link) plus two other suburban notables: Scatchell's in Cicero, which has a well-salted beef topped with fresh celery, and Chickies in Hillside, where the shaved spicy green-pepper giardiniera is one-of-a-kind. For the purposes of this tasting session and to level-set the field, I ordered all beefs dipped (the whole sandwich is dunked in the gravy) and topped with hot giardiniera. M.M.

Joe Boston's Italian Beef

2932 W. Chicago Ave. 773-486-9536

Price: $5.50

Founded in 1949 as a social club, Joe Boston's son-in-law Spero Kutrubis still runs the place. Boston's cooks its beef in-house and slices it paper-thin on a deli slicer. There's a hint of oregano and lots of black pepper specks. The Italian loaves they use held up well to the gravy. The vinegary giardiniera here is packed with carrots and cauliflower, and the acidic tang of the veggies sliced through and offset the richness of the beef

Al's Beef

1079 W. Taylor St. 312-226-4017

Price: $6.05

Though they've franchised, I think the original location still makes the best. They cook their top sirloin butts in-house with a proprietary blend of herbs and spices. There's a sweet top-note—perhaps nutmeg or allspice—that no other beef in the city possesses. The meat is so tender, it disintegrates into tiny shards, merges with the gravy-soaked bun and is punctuated with whole bits of coriander.

Al's gravy is the ultimate in beefiness, flavored with rich fatty suet that you taste in an old-school French fry. The orange bun-staining giardiniera also includes slices of fennel. Any beef-eating here is enhanced by the signed photo of former Gov. Rod Blagojevich—encased behind bars and stuck with a label noting His Hairness's "parole day" as "Jan 2023"—that hangs in the dining room.

The Patio

1503 W. Taylor St. 312-829-0454

Price: $4.60

Opened in 1948, The Patio calls its sandwich "Italian Roast Beef." This is the thickest cut of the ones I tasted, more reminiscent of a plated slice of roast beef than the paper-thin meat at Boston's or the shard-like meat of Al's. This beef had a nice bit of pepper, but was the least seasoned and could have used a touch more salt. The roll was still crispy and the least dipped. The giardiniera was fiery—the hottest of the bunch—and loaded with fresh curls of sliced celery.

Lego love

By Gwendolyn Purdom | FOR REDEYE

When Andrew Johnson is out at bars and needs an icebreaker, his job comes in handy.

"The title of Lego Master Model Builder is not something you hear very often, so it's always easy to start a conversation," Johnson said.

Impressing the opposite sex, though, is only one of the many perks Johnson enjoys since he became a Master Model Builder at Legoland Discovery Center Chicago last year.

Johnson spends his days teaching the Schaumburg center's visitors the latest building techniques; planning new installations and events; and snapping plastic bricks into place in the scaled-down version of Chicago the facility maintains, made from more than 1 million Lego pieces. At 25, Johnson is one of only five Lego Master Model Builders in the country.

"I never realized that this could be a full-time position, that this [job] even existed," said Johnson, a DePaul graduate. "And now I'm here getting to play with toys and kids and coming up with all these original creations all day. It's definitely something I didn't see coming."

In recent weeks, Johnson and his team have spent hours building intricate, foot-long Lego spiders and larger Lego monsters for the "Brick-or-Treat" Halloween festivities. Though his roommate disagrees, Johnson insists you're never too old for Lego.

"The bricks themselves don't have an age limit," Johnson said. "There are grandparents that bring their grandkids [to the Discovery Center] and they start out just admiring things, and then slowly you see them drawn to the bricks. They start to build their own things. I find while I'm building, I'll lose track of time. It's almost therapeutic."

Lizzy Caplan’s naked truth

Los Angeles Times

Lizzy Caplan was a senior in high school when she first experienced the crushing disappointment that comes with life as an actress.

“We did ‘Much Ado About Nothing’ and ‘Romeo & Juliet.’ And of course I wanted to be Juliet, but I got cast as Beatrice,” which made her angry, she recalls over late-afternoon coffee in SoHo at the tail end of a week promoting her new Showtime series, “Masters of Sex.”

With the benefit of hindsight, however, Caplan is able to see the silver lining. “Thinking I knew what I wanted out of my career in high school is, like, so naive. Beatrice is a much better role.”

Her high school drama teacher was clearly on to something. It’s hard to imagine Caplan, 31, as the quintessential moony-eyed romantic.

Now, she’s earning rave critical notices as a character not even Shakespeare could have envisioned. In “Masters of Sex,” she plays Virginia Johnson, one half of the famed sex research duo Masters and Johnson, whose 1966 tome “Human Sexual Response” became an unlikely bestseller, shattered myths about the female orgasm and helped ignite the Sexual Revolution.

The drama, based on Thomas Maier’s 2009 book of the same name, opens in 1956, the year that Johnson, a twice-divorced single mother, was hired as a secretary for William Masters (Michael Sheen), then a prominent gynecologist at Washington University School of Medicine in St. Louis. Though she lacked medical training or even a college degree, Johnson quickly became an invaluable collaborator and, later, his wife.

As embodied by Caplan, Johnson is a woman well ahead of her time, at once sexually liberated and emotionally closed off.

Masters of Sex

9 p.m. Sundays, Showtime

“Everything she does is a series of contradictions,” said the actress, who, much to her disappointment, never got the chance to meet Johnson. The researcher died in July at age 88.

Though Caplan would appear to have little in common with the farm girl-turned-sexologist, she found it helpful to focus on their points of connection—such as, both she and Johnson lost their virginity to their high school sweethearts.

“It was just a completely appropriate, safe, lovely way to start experiencing myself as a woman. There was nothing traumatic. And that’s so luck of the draw, kind of terrifyingly so. I guess my dad is going to know how I lost my virginity,” she said, suddenly catching herself.

Then, with a shrug, she continues: “But if I can’t have that conversation at this point, after this week, well ...”

Caplan recalls being filled with terror when, as the series was about to go into production, show runner Michelle Ashford sent her an outline of the episodes ahead.

“I had a year away from the nudity [after filming the pilot]. And I just remember sitting at my kitchen table reading it all at once, being like, ‘Oh, my God, I have to do it.’ It was really overwhelming,” she said. “You have such mixed emotions about it, especially as a woman. It’s like, am I exploiting myself or am I empowering myself?”

“It’s a testament to the writing that you can have a show about sex with lots of female nudity and still have it be a feminist story,” she said.

REZA ASLAN

The Chicago Public Library welcomes internationally acclaimed writer and scholar of religions Reza Aslan, for a discussion on his bestselling book Zealot: The Life and Times of Jesus of Nazareth. The free program takes place on Wednesday, October 30 at 6 p.m., in the Cindy Pritzker Auditorium, Lower Level, at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. Zealot offers a fresh perspective to one of the greatest stories ever told, as it affirms the radical and transformative nature of Jesus of Nazareth's life and mission. This lecture is presented as part of The Albert Pick, Jr. Fund International Relations Project at the Chicago Public Library, through a grant to the Chicago Public Library Foundation. For more information, visit chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call 312-747-4050. (Photo Credit: Malin Fezehal).

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Let go of outdated attitudes that no longer serve you. If you've been searching for Mr. Right, focus on finding Mr. Right Now. If you've been obsessed with turning a casual fling into something more serious, stop it.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You're in the mood to give advice, even if nobody wants it. You'll lecture your girlfriend about why her boyfriend is a loser or outline all the flaws in your male buddy's marriage. Venus is turning you into a jerk, but you'll get over it.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

If you're not getting your way, you'll put your foot down and pout. Mars is making you super impatient. If that hot girl or cute guy who has been teasing you for weeks doesn't respond, you might decide to do something drastic.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Someone could have a huge crush on you, but you're not paying attention. The moon is keeping you distracted with work, roommates, pets and just about everything else.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Saturn is encouraging you to pay attention to the structure of a relationship. If you're dating a guy and he isn't willing to leave his wife, no wonder you feel insecure. Or if you're with a girl who is still hung up on somebody else, there's a reason why it seems weird.

Aries March 21-April 19

You're reaching a turning point in a relationship. A moon opposition has you seeing the pros and cons within your romance. On the one hand, your partner is gorgeous. On the other, you're tired of dating someone with a tiny IQ.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Mars is urging you to get practical. It wasn't such a great idea to move in with your boyfriend and his six roommates. Or you should reconsider your plans to have kid, since you're both unemployed.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Usually when you feel cranky, you throw yourself into social activities. Pluto is telling you not to fret about that flirtation that didn't work out, since there are plenty more for you to enjoy. And don't fall into obsession about an ex.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You could find yourself confronting an unpleasant truth, courtesy of the sun. That extra 10 pounds is not going to disappear on its own. And casually sleeping with that guy or girl just put you into a messy situation.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

You're wondering how to handle your romantic situation. The key thing is to go with the flow instead of micromanaging everything. A solar eclipse is reminding you to just hang out with your honey and have simple fun.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Mercury is making your partner's flaws crystal clear. You'll complain about his housekeeping habits or her annoying friends. Just remember, you can be pretty annoying, too. Concentrate on the positive things in your relationship.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

The moon is increasing your sex drive, and you'll be tempted to act on your lust. If you're single, you'll go through your contacts list to arrange a hookup. If you're in a relationship, you'll lure your honey home early from work.

Where is the 'Munger Road' sequel? We'll just have to wait

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» @TribLuis

Forget "Who done it?" The real mystery surrounding the sequel to the indie horror flick "Munger Road"—which revolved around a killer on the loose in the St. Charles area and ended with one of more abrupt cliffhangers you'll see in a movie—has been "Where is it?"

Writer and director Nicholas Smith told

The Courier-News last year that the sequel to his suspenseful 2011 film would hit theaters this month, but little else had been reported on part two of the once buzzed-about movie since then.

That's because the sequel has yet to go into production.

According to "Munger Road" producer Kyle Heller—like Smith, a Columbia College Chicago alum—the search for financial backing has taken longer than expected. The 29-year-old Smith and the producers want to increase the budget to around $1 million, which is five times the original's $200,000 budget. He claimed they are in ongoing talks with potential investors and also are considering a crowdfunding campaign on indiegogo.com.

"We were ready to jump right into it, but unfortunately never connected with the right person to take the ride with us," said Heller, 27, adding that the sequel's script calls for "ambitious set pieces and car chases and explosions. Things like that require more resources and funding. ... We actually wrote the sequel first, but decided to make a smaller feature in our first attempt, which was 'Munger Road.'"

Smith said the delay also is due to the fact the movie is still in the process of recouping some of the money it made. The St. Charles native admitted that the process is more complicated than he anticipated. He also pointed out that it's not easy getting the investors from the original film on board for the sequel when they still haven't made all their money back from the first film.

"Munger Road" featured a relatively unknown cast, other than Oscar-nominated actor Bruce Davison ("X-Men"), and was filmed in 16 days in St. Charles, Bartlett, Elburn, Geneva and Sugar Grove. The movie premiered at Charlestowne 18 theater in St. Charles in September 2011 and reportedly earned the highest per-screen average in the country that weekend. Boxoffice Mojo.com reports that the film, which played a total of 35 theaters in the Chicago area, made $266,689 at the box office by the end of its theatrical run. It is currently streaming on Netflix.

BEHIND THE PLOT

In "Munger Road," four teens drive to a railroad crossing in Bartlett said to be haunted by ghosts on the same night a notorious serial killer escapes from a prison bus. Because the area's Scarecrow Festival takes place the next day, the mayor wants to keep things under wraps to avoid scaring away tourists. The ghost story in the film is inspired by an actual Munger Road urban legend, and the Scarecrow Festival is a real-life celebration held annually in St. Charles.

Breaking up

Well, here's a split we didn't see coming: Orlando Bloom and Miranda Kerr, who married in 2010, have been apart for months, they confirmed late Thursday. "In a joint statement, Orlando Bloom and Miranda Kerr have announced that they have been amicably separated for the past few months," a rep for Bloom confirmed to enline.com. "After six years together, they have recently decided to formalize their separation."

“It is two writing/singing geniuses on one track. Seemed logical to me.” —DJ White Shadow, a Chicago-based producer, to the Tribune's Luis Gomez on bringing together Lady Gaga and R. Kelly for their new single, "Do What U Want"

King of nightmares

In case there was any doubt that Michael Jackson's "Thriller" is the best Halloween-themed song, billboard.com crunched the numbers to prove it. "Monster Mash" was No. 2, followed by "Ghostbusters" at No. 3. Hey, we'll zombie dance to that!

ALEX GARCIA/TRIBUNE

Was Cousin It invited?

Wednesday Addams is all grown up! Christina Ricci married long-time boyfriend James Heerdeggen on Saturday, people.com reports. The bride wore a Givenchy haute couture wedding gown for the Manhattan ceremony, the celeb-site reports. Somewhere, Wednesday is not impressed.

She chose poorly

Another Halloween, another celebrity in an offensive costume. This year, it was Julianne Hough, who apologized Saturday for donning blackface as a character from "Orange Is the New Black." "I realize my costume hurt and offended people and I truly apologize," she tweeted Saturday. Seriously, celebs. Can we talk about learning from others' mistakes?

THE DIGIT

$32 MILLION

That's how much "Jackass Presents: Bad Grandpa" made at the box office this weekend, knocking "Gravity" out of first place after three weeks in the top slot, Reuters reports. Brad Pitt crime drama "The Counselor" debuted in fourth place, with just $8 million.
